It's time for bed, but the children are still full of energy. They're jumping on the bed, running around the room, and making all sorts of noise. Mom and Dad are starting to get worried. They know that if the children don't calm down soon, they're not going to be able to fall asleep.

Mom and Dad try to reason with the children. They tell them that it's time for bed and that they need to be quiet. But the children don't listen. They keep on jumping and running and making noise.

Finally, Mom and Dad have had enough. They tell the children that if they don't stop making noise, they're going to have to go to bed without any stories.

That does the trick. The children stop making noise and get into bed. Mom and Dad tuck them in and give them each a kiss goodnight.

As Mom and Dad turn out the light, they can hear the children's soft breathing. They're finally asleep.

Mom and Dad are relieved. They know that the children will have a good night's sleep and wake up feeling refreshed in the morning.
